YTF SCOOP

THE MONTHLY RELEASE FOR THE YOUTH BY THE YOUTH.
JULY 2020

We bring you one inspirational person with their birthday every month!

From a first year apprentice plumber on a building site to being the only person to hold 2 belts in 2 different categories at the same time, Conor McGregor is a good person to look at this month!

The 5th most recognised athlete on earth and also a successful entrepreneur now Conor is a man of power. An animal, a beast coming from the nation of Ireland known for producing fighters, his style, attitude, confidence, strength and his ability to back his trash talk are second to none.

We all know how and what an amazing man Conor has become but very few of us know about his humble beginning.

Conor was a first year apprentice plumber who used to work on building sites, he used to do menial jobs in order to support his fighting career. A hard worker and a believer in the law of attraction, Conor is a person who creates his future. He first came under the UFC's radar when he defeated Ivan Buchinger. Since then, we all have seen his meteoric rise to the top.

What makes Conor so special is his ability to predict how his fights are going to go to the last second. He's known for predicting the time, shot and moment at which he's going to defeat his opponent. He made history when he knocked out Jose Aldo Jr. a fighter who hadn't lost in over 10 years in 13 seconds for the featherweight title after predicting the same.

Conor is not only a successful fighter but he's also a successful entrepreneur, his whiskey company proper 12 has become Ireland's no. 1 whiskey in a very short time surpassing a lot of major brands on the way. Some of you may not like Conor as he seems arrogant and impulsive but he's super humble in both victory and defeat. Love him or hate him, Conor McGregor is unapologetically Conor McGregor.

2020: The Year of Change

THERE IS NOTHING WRONG ABOUT 2020, WHAT'S WRONG IS YOUR PERSPECTIVE!

6 months of 2020 gone. Snap, just like that. 6 months wasted in cursing and blaming and making memes about 2020. This is the wake-up call, why can't we see it?

Until 2020, people grew their companies with ego, and this ego was boosted by us getting anything with a click and within a day. Families had stopped talking. Families had stopped communicating effectively. The work-life balance was lost. Every child had a phone. Which they never used to learn, but filter out the imperfections. Making them popular on social media, and alone back at home. Global warming, the pollution had got us all. Everything was ruined. We were in the endgame.

But then, then came a virus. A virus very contagious. So the government told us to stay home, and stay safe. And with the fear, people started to learn more about their families. People started communicating at home. They forgot their devices, and spent time with their families, and remembered how to laugh. Everyone clapped to say thank you and used their device to connect and talk to the people who they couldn't actually connect with. Forgetting the chase for perfection.

The vehicles started to rust, as people began connecting with their families and knowing the value of every relationship. Knowing the value, mental health awareness arose, as people cared for and loved themselves. Some learnt to cook, some learnt to sing, some learnt to write, and engaged in other activities that made them happy. With fewer people and pollution less, the earth began to heal, and the wildlife got air to breathe.

And as we will all be allowed to go out, we'll all prefer the world we've found inside. Inside our very own hearts and minds. We'll all choose to be with our families, over entering the unending rat race of chasing perfection and never reaching there. We will learn to be happy, connect with people and love everyone.

This year is bringing back people together. It is connecting all of us.

2020 is not the worst as we believe it to be with the rise of 2020 meme culture. Rather, it is a year of change.

Everything is changing for the better. And what're we up to? Do we still choose to keep ourselves sad just to laugh at memes? Do we still choose to stay so much inside of our ego, that we can never see the bigger picture? Are we so narrow-minded that we can never take a look at the bigger picture and feel better about ourselves?

Or do we still want to think small, blame 2020 (which won't make time faster anyway), and be sad all year?

Half of the year of change is gone, what we do with the rest? The choice is ours.

Book Review

TOTTO-CHAN THE LITTLE GIRL AT THE WINDOW

Totto-chan The Little Girl At The Window by Tetsuko Kuroyanagi is a must read, may you be an avid reader or not. The book is undeniably an amazing piece of literature that can give education institutions and teaching systems a whole new meaning. It was published in 1981 in Japan after which it (undoubtedly) became an instant bestseller. The book is way ahead of its time while still sticking to the political and social norms of that era.

The book is an autobiographical memoir of a little girl named Totto-chan who is bored of the monotony of traditional schooling methods. She's expelled from her former school because of her inattentive and distracted nature which thereby leads her mother to admit her into Tomoe Gakuen, her new school. The admission is followed by Totto-chan instantly befriending the headmaster and smoothly fitting right into the strange routine and teaching of the school as well as her fellow class mates. The book takes us through the school's various activities that make us rethink our own school days and wish we had a school like Tomoe Gakuen.

The story line is based against the background of the second world war, which the students of Tomoe Gakuen are completely oblivious of, while the author gives out subtle hints such as Totto-chan's mother's inability to give her a wholesome lunch box or regulations against staying out too late.

Against all the odds, the students of Tomoe Gakuen along with their jolly

Every instance in the book is extremely heart warming and the ending has a significance of its own.

HUMAN PSYCHOLOGY

Once you are angry on him or her,
A small mistake by them makes you angrier!

Once you love him or her truly,
Even a small action by them affects you deeply.

Never that the human psych wants to be happy and positive,
They need quotes and therapy to get rid of the negative.

They need comparison and competition like water,
Not only this, but to take revenge they are ready to slaughter!

Hard to find is that affable him or her,
Because at the end you are only supporter.

Made up of many ingredients, the world is a dish,
People can smell bad, but can be as proteinaceous as a fish!

No one can be understood in this colourful world,
Some like straight hair, others like curled....

Judging is like oxygen to human's mind,
Forgiving personality is very hard to find!

This is the human psychology we name,
No one in this unique world is same!!

WAKE UP CALL!

Why do we all want a job in the USA? Why do we want to lead ourselves to the growth of some other economy, when we have our own to work on?

Why do we never fail to find Indians in every corner of the world? Why is our economy very slow as compared to many other European or American economies?

Firstly, what makes us Indians settle for jobs?

The fixed mindset comes flashing into the picture. We Indians have always had this mentality saying, “Nokri nahi, to Chokri nahi” and some similar quotes in your local language that push you towards settling for a job. What makes us settle for someone dictating our lives? What makes us work for someone else’s dream? The only simple answer, ‘lack of ambition’. We never think of taking the responsibility and taking the risk because we’re too busy settling in quickly.

UAE has around 40% Indians, France has around 28% Indians, Guyana with around 43.5% and Mauritius with a shocking majority of 68.3% Indians.

Why?

Better opportunities? Better quality of life? Better studies, experience? Money? Global exposure? These might be some perspectives people have when they think of moving abroad.

If our people are demanding better lifestyles, then the foreign countries are the ones supplying them. Resulting in draining Indian of resources and minds.

So, what's the solution to keep the minds in India? Promoting entrepreneurship. Creating opportunities. Isn't this our job as the youth of the country? Should we not at least try to change the complete scenario by filling the gaps with opportunities?

India is very amazing. Our perspectives and acts are what make it so weak and subtle. We need to make the change, because we are the future.

What is WHAT? What is WHY? You'll get to know that soon enough!
Stay tuned.
